Sunday visitors to the Bronx Zoo enoyed the spectacle of Gunda, the largest elephant in capitivity and one of the most vicious, terrified and completely humbled by a tiny dog which had crept into his enclosure. The trumpeting of the elephant drowned the sharp barks of his small termenter and drew crowds from all over the park.

Gunda is respected for his ugly temper. and only his trainer, Walter Thuman, dares to go within reach of his trunk and tusks. Never before had his valor been questioned. Yesterday a small mongrel roamed into the paddock which adjoins the elephant house, and coming suddenly upon the half asleep. Gunda awakened him into a frenzy of fear.

Trumpeting with fright the elephant retreated, while the dog, encouraged by the onlookers and pleased with his own prowess, pressed him close. Gunda was finally backed into the corner of his hour.
